The Elephant Research Project is a unique activity offered at White Elephant as an alternative to Game drives, Walks, Boat cruises and Fishing. This activity is educational, interactive and visual, and includes spending time with our research and conservation staff.

After an early breakfast, guests depart for a boat cruise on Lake Jozini to locate and watch the elephants from the boat. After a few hours on the water, guests are returned to the camp.

The activity continues in the afternoon with a visit to our Research Centre, to watch the BBC production "Operation Elephant-The Mission" documenting the initial re-location of our elephants from the Kruger National Park. Guests examine elephant skulls and bones and participate in discussions and debates. Spending time in the world of elephants is enlightening and fascinating, and offers insight into the Reserve history, the re-wilding and re-stocking of animals, nature and conservation issues, and the purpose of the Space for Elephants foundation and our other research projects.
